Adherents of man-made religion are steeped in an astoundingly ignorant credulity exclusive to none, with the following ~~example~~ part and parcel to all

Its really quite amazing, ~~[illegible]~~ because, as most Christians don't know, there are -and were- numerous gospels, epistles, etc., with as much validity as those which comprise the current Bible, presently considered "canonical", or, "inspired": but, due to fickle opinions of ~~man~~ and through custom craftings, are excluded from our "modern", "correct", "inspired" Bible, and are thus deemed "uncanonical", "uninspired": FALSE. Half of what is likely, or could be thought of, as truth, has been unjustly left out of the Bible, while half of whats been allowed into - and thus accepted of - ~~[illegible]~~ it, could very likely be false. Undetected forgeries and truths riddled with "uninspired" interpolations.

Its astounding - the utter ignorance of the subject most possess; and so sad, what those fanatical believers insist upon: that merely because a book has "God" stamped upon it, means ~~that~~ it is thus somehow immune to the perverting touch of man - is immutable: what an absolute absence of a God-given brain! And because of the existence and cultivation of that sort of mind, the world is destined (predestination indeed) to be what it has been, ad infinitum. Madness it is, to feverishly obsess over such ~~things~~ written things as those, whilst relegating one's heart to a position of no consequence - when one of the primary teachings is that God IS Love; embodying fellowship, empathy, brotherhood, the uplifting of others, self-control and personal growth - which all spring from the heart! But mankind neglects the heart - the foundation, the cornerstone, the "rock" - as trivial, and instead fixates upon man-made fantasies and myths, debating and arguing, judging and persecuting, over differences of literary interpretations of said, readily mutable material!

How much sense - Godliness - lies in that? If anything, God's up there, shaking his head in disgust at our perpetually self-imposed ignorance, since he's given us the tools with which to extricate ourselves from our fate, yet we insist upon our ever-present course... Funny how our greatest gift from Him is our brain, yet Religion disdains its usage - what a contradiction, indeed, a sacrilege.

ON the invalidation/dehumanization tactics/effects of CDCR and government thru "labelling"

Its a harsh reality, that once experienced and realized, simultaneously discredits you and anything that leaves your lips upon the subject - or anything else you have to say - for you are subhuman; no longer to be believed. Its the perfect, flawless defense of such an industry as the American Prison System, interwoven with the upper echelons of society and legal system as it is; preying and subsisting upon the poor, ignorant, discarded and despised - regardless of color or creed.

CDCR is all about the money, encouraging recidivism for a reliable supply of inmates, but to maintain public trust it endeavors to appear benevolent, boasting of all of its 'rehabilitative' programs, ie vocational trainings, education and self-help groups; but anyone familiar with the realities of prison knows that, while there are some decent things, the majority are farces: conducted and supervised by apathetic free-staff who are only there for the paycheck, as CDCR is a treasure-trove of no-work and high pay; with inmates assigned to, say, 'education', making no progress after many years, due to teachers that don't teach, myself being a teacher's aide at one time and having a front-row seat to the terrible waste of human lives and their time upon this earth, and almost all 'groups' being ones run solely by inmates - many of whom are unqualified and/or have the wrong motivations for doing so - with paid staff aka 'sponsors' taking a background role of nothing more than logging who attends and dressing as provocatively as possible.

While portraying itself so, it maintains living conditions for inmates that are highly stressful (due in part to excessive noise, 24/7 light pollution, over-crowding, abusive and negligent staff, and the heightened levels of tension and hostility stemming from these factors): filthy, sleep-depriving, and oppressively negative, while providing such surface-level medical care as to be in name only, keeping inmates in a state of perpetual suffering - worse than how animals are kept, and one of the darkest secrets of prison.

To expect an inmate - or any human being - to flourish under such circumstances is highly unreasonable and unrealistic, yet the deluded public holds this expectation, in large part due to the system's half, no, QUARTER-truth propaganda. People entering prison are unavoidably and irreparably traumatized and scarred, witnessing and being subjected to violence and other wicked things at the hands of other inmates and prison guards; acquiring mental illnesses - or enjoying their existing issues' exacerbation - like overwhelming and debilitating anxieties, depression, OCD, anti-social tendencies, anger problems and ptsd (you try seeing a throat slit, or brain-matter upon the walls and floor, or hear the unearthly squeal-scream of another human being being choked, or the sounds of someone fighting for their life, or succumbing to rape - all things only possible because of the twisted avarice and apathy of the system and public ignorance and inaction) - essentially breaking people down and reforming them - into people with even higher likelihoods of breaking the law than when they FIRST entered prison. Couple this with 2nd-class citizenship and little or no effective support once "free", and likely recidivism is thus explained, with the system's explanation an insidious fabrication, serving to keep the public distracted from the problem, while the supreme injustice of its intentional failure to inform the public - child-like in its ignorant credulousness - of the truth continues, and so it maintains and furthers its malevolent agenda of deception, avarice, suffering and inhumanity.

On the "informative" show, Full Measure, the statement was made to a naive public that inmates cost tax-payers $75,000 per year, and, the speaker did not break this large figure down, to the benefit of the system and loss to the truth. Instead, he merely attributed it to the cost of groups, rehabilitative programs, education, lights and water.

Isn't it curious that there is no - and there never is - mention of how prison staff make exhorbitant wages, breaking - oftentimes - $100,000 only three-quarters of the way through the year? Their unwarranted, obscene wages come from somewhere, yes? Is it not, then, out of the $75,000 cost to the taxpayers, of "housing" an inmate per year? Doubtless the largest portion - if that figure is truthfully broken down - stems from their pay: so then, why, I ask, is this important "informative" information withheld from the public, if the system is indeed so magnanimous and morally upright - worthy of their trust?

Perhaps, if lighting costs so much, then it should be considered to reduce the unnecessary usage of it? Like when the excessively bright lights are left on all night while inmates attempt to sleep, shining directly into their faces and torturing their rest? With not even a single foot's width of a towel allowed to hang from their bunks to block this light from ↓ their faces: citing "safety and security" - a hollow excuse to continue just one type of many similarly cruel torments inflicted upon inmates routinely.

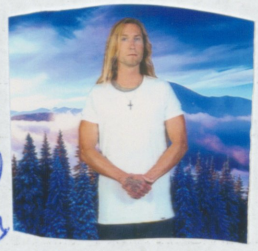
Or, isn't it curious that no-one is allowed to take water from prison facilities? What ever could be the reason for such a strange rule? At $75,000 a year - and "water" being a "significant" part of that figure - then that must be some good water, huh? Then why the exceeding worry over taking it? Could it just possibly be the fear that independent testing would occur? Helping explain the health problems inmates get so often - like cancer? Hmm... But if its such a benevolent system - worthy of the public's unquestioning trust - then why such an incredible absence of transparency? No cameras allowed on site, with media having to be thoroughly vetted and go through a complex approval process before this rule is excepted, solely for them; then they are guided every step of the way - safety a concern, of course, although the need is greatly exaggerated; and, just another dehumanizing propaganda tool of the prison system: for what inmate is prone to nonsensically waylaying a camera-crew, who's presence and future revelations to an ignorant public only stands to benefit him in rousing them from their vegetatively apathetic, stuporous state? - but, perhaps more likely: so that they'll only see what is desired of them to see.

Wake up America, and learn some of that empathy it seems only "criminals" are expected to have.

END



Thank you for your time in reading this: hopefully you'll be able to use it to effect positive change somewhere... without bolstering the mistaken notion (and often purposefully perpetuated lie) that prisons are a tool of a "systemically racist" white bogeyman dreamt up as a convenient scapegoat for the shirking of responsibility; as the reality is that age old divide between rich and poor - and our distraction with race delays resolution of the true problem that knows no color. We would go far in recognizing it as such instead of coddling and entertaining these solely inflammatory and ignorance-promoting "victim culture" propagandists who only worsen the situation: most convenient for those who benefit from such delusions (the rich). Take care and have a wonderful day - and Happy Valentine's too!

Yours Truly,
Shaun
