

People ~~of~~ the outside world do not nor cannot grasp how it feels to be confined in a typical prison cell in the state of California. What I suggest for those who want to experience what it may feel like is to take a typical bathroom no bigger than ninety one square feet put in a bunk bed, a toilet with sink attached a three foot wide by two foot deep table, a stool, two wall cabinets four and a half feet wide, fifteen inches deep, two foot high, one above the other, two feet separating the two of them; from the top of the lower to the bottom of the upper and live in it with a person you most likely will not get along with. And then try to keep your sanity and maybe get a good nights sleep. And you must live in this space for the balance of your natural life.
