

“Southern Discomfort”

Then there's the joke about inmates in Arkansas prisons that goes something like this: What's the difference between a near-sighted armadillo and an Arkansas inmate?

Eventually the former sees well enough to see safely across a car-filled highway while the latter, even if he had possessed the eyes of Argus, will not unite as a whole to rid themselves of the sateri that afflicts them.

When it comes to a state controlling its pained forlorn hope population via all kinds of chicanery, no state does it... better than the State of Arkansas. While other states (even via Federal decrees or threats of takeover) have come to the realization that its forlorn hopes are human beings who deserve to be rehabilitated, judiciously. To ensure that they will reenter... society as better considerers of another's humanity, to thwart the accursed spectre of recidivism (not so with "De Banana Republic, the nickname for Arkansas coined by former Governor and 2016 Presidential hopeful Mike Huckabee).

The inmate population... in Arkansas stands over 15,000 (plus thousands who're confined in county jails who've been sentenced to prison) and many have cited that this figure will go up in the next two to three years - if not one year.
Inmates do not get paid (as other states pay their inmates) for their forced labor (under threat of major disciplinary action) They are classified to... do use a classification meeting, are not allowed to have opinions, aren't allowed to vote, e.g.

Yet the Arkansas Department of Correction employs what's called the "tin cup" rule as... one way to enforce control... over the inmate population. Basically the rule cites as follows: I suck up to these (certain inmates up unit officers) above you, abuse those below (fellow inmates).

This is a rule that is abhorred by those persons who refuse to allow themselves to become institutionalized by a kakistocratic corrections system that's nothing more sui generis than the devil ex machina it's an acolyte of.

This is shameful. Here you've a prison population that cuts numbers free used "inmates" (personnel) greatly, but has no sense of unity or any desire to embrace unity and call for reform. Whenever the lumpen-proletariats are afraid to embrace the mantle of angry young men/women, they cannot win the battle. It's akin to a guy sick person knowing he's has to see a doctor but he's has a bad case of iatrophobia.

In the Arkansas Department of Correction, omnis regula suas patitur exceptiones and omnium contributione sancitur quod pro omnibus datum est, is manifested towards its human cattle population via use of this Southern discomport, the "tin cup" rule. To those of us who're well informed of this distasteful tactic, it's beyond being soigne. To those of us who allow it to be... enforced against them, it's considered - neme presumit-ur malus.

Something so philistine even Heaven Jis quite dudgenous towards.
