

The Grench that stole Christmas
(2019) by Erin Kuhn-Brown #72103

I am sure that you have heard of tales from the Crypt... well, this is Tales from Florence McClure Womens Correctional Ctr. in Las Vegas, NV. Being housed at the only Womens Prison in Nevada doing almost 20 years, I have watched this place evolve over the years to its detriment. What use is to be a place of growth, encouragement & positive correction has become a place of finger pointing, the State covering each others' rear ends, and going after the inmates who are proven to not always be the criminals.

One of our wardens... Alwp Gabrielle Garcia has been with NDOC a long time working her way through the ranks, and has actively been a part of the changes being brought to this facility. The changes have not only occurred to the facility, but rather to the people who run it, and who are the decision makers. I never in all my years would have expected ^{that} the joy of the holidays could be removed from someone's life. . . . And now I know different. A memo went up at the beginning of October 2019, declaring that only level 1 & 2 could decorate their cells doors for the holidays. Level 3, who are individuals housed in segregation & the Behavioral Management Unit, are told that they may do none of the above. (Some grew a tiny Christmas tree with lights managed to be set up here in the BMU, and on Thanksgiving morning, authorities became aware of its existence. . . . And it was promptly dismantled.) (Song)

You a mean one, warden Garcia. . . .
You a mean one, warden Garcia. . . .
You thoughtless & unkind. . . .
You refuse to let the holiday shine. . . .
You say no decorating in level 3. . . . And if it was your way, we'd never see the sun again. Happy holidays!
