

Contact

Today I considered harmony and infinity in death, birth and the concept of contact. Contact for reasons to this essay is defined as experience.

Experience is rather hard for me to even begin to describe. So for the sake of my time and effort I'll call it contact.

Contact implies reach but can also imply the subtle underlinings that one does not notice. Contact can be strong, weak, or even completely theoretical. I want to develop this essay on theoretical contact, without further due, so please amuse yourself as much as I do.

Experience and contact if used interchangeably can define a series of subject I really feel deserve attention. The substance of life is experienced obviously but when we use the word contact we see there is much more to experience and life through the concepts that interline experience and life by using the word contact. Thence, there must be a proverbial context in calling life and experience with respect to contact. Contact is an action and is done to others through intention and purpose, so when we interchangeably use contact with life and experience we see the realm of spiritual warfare. All things can be explained but most are not, but I intend to see my mind on paper. We are experiencing contact of life. Everything is created to fit in place the more complex the less it's understood. However, that's not to say no one did it. So harmony, ideal harmony created all things if it exists in my concept.

ps. There fore every thing in life your ~~HA~~ life means something rather meaningful
