

Burnt

to change the way I felt I burnt myself today fire cleanses, doesn't it? arson led me astray

(I thought) I hated the life I led myself and others, too so I lit the match, I set the fire but arson wasn't through

The thing with arson is you should always check the wind 'cause arson burns both ways burns twice those that sin everything I'd worked for in a life that I once strolled up in flames, it all burnt arson turned it into coals everyone I loved and knew and those few I really hated screaming, burning, along with me but arson wasn't satisfied

Burnt (continued)...

the thing about arson is you better check the wind 'cause arson burns everything burns hot once it begins

I can't glue ashes together to get back what I have lost or breath life back into at whom the match was tossed so I will till my soul that's barren, burn, and black to prepare the soil of my heart and grow a better me back the truth of arson is that you'll never, ever win 'cause arson burns all you love it always burns who sins

I've committed arson will the truth set me free? with what's left I'll cultivate and plant the seeds of me

Burnt (continued)...

to change the way I felt I burnt myself away but water, love, and light from above now keep the flames at bay you see, the lie of arson is that change is fueled by fire but its honesty and humility which grant the life we desire 10-30-14

[Published in Battle magazine, June 2022]

Scott Macoulet
#372656