

Systematic Chess

We all know the three branches of Government, legislative, judicial, and the executive. Rather were aware of how they function, and how far their roots reach is another story. I'd like to examine each department slightly, and then show you how their system is grafted inside of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice (TDCJ), and how TDCJ uses this system on a smaller scale, but lets look at the three branches of Government

First, legislative, in one word "lawmakers", those such as Congresspersons that pass law, not per se propose them, that would be the senators and people that get bills and laws looked at, go before lawmakers for us. Example, lets say you and I, see that there's a need for prison reform and we come up with a plan that's safe and within our budget, and will give jobs to people out of work etc. Now we have senators that we go to with what will be labelled as a bill. This bill is proposed to congress, "lawmakers" rather or not this should become law. This branch of Government also deals with our taxes

Second, judicial branch of Government, endowed with powers to delegate authority to courts, judges, magistrates, carrying out justice. Lets say your in prison, on your way to prison, or on your way to appearing before a judge, your dealing with the judicial branch of Government - crime, punishment, and triers of facts

Thirdly, Executive branch of Government - This branch of Government is charged with carrying out orders on the lowest level, like your police officers, TDC officers, jailers, dealing with the public, ~~execute~~ ^{execute} the laws passed and those that have some power over legislation) basically one that exercises administrative or managerial control

Now before we get into discussions lets bridge the gap and show the correlation and equivalence of the two. The legislative(s) Branch of government that makes and delegates powers to the lower, would be equivalent to the Department of Criminal Justice that makes the rules and handbooks and policies that govern the institutions or unit, highest administration such as Regional Directress). Congress vs Directors.

Next, Judicial branch of government, which is the Department that deals with the courts, judges and magistrates. Carrying out justice using the law of which the legislative should govern the people. This would be equivalent to the next step, level of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Warden's Administration, committee that says, this is the rules and handbook from the ~~judicial~~ legislative, directors says we are to govern the inmates by

Finally we have the Executive branch of government. Those that deal with the public directly, like officers, the armed forces, those responsible for carrying out the law made by lawmakers that is to say; I didn't make the law its just here to enforce them. This would be likened to the lowest branch, level of TDCJ, jailers who's responsible for the keeping and watching over and looking officials who works closely with the judicial Department of government. Now we see how Texas has mimiced and built its system as close as it could to the united states government we will deal with a few minor and major supporting details, why its the lone star state, why like the government and constitution is experiencing the breakdown that it is,

Why "we the people" doesn't live up to its creed, why Criminal behavior seems to roll down hill, And why the Pawns matter the most in the systematic chess game

1st lets look at a major supporting detail, "Breakdown" that are similar between the two systems

- (A) legislative vs administrative
- (B) Communication from Top to bottom levels

2nd major supporting detail "we the people"

- (A) Inmates at odds with administration
- (B) "Textbook vs hands on"

3rd major supporting detail "Pawns in the game"

- (A) you push I push.
- (B) Sacrifice
- (C) Pawn that can't think lets look at our ~~First~~ Sub-Topic listed under major and minor supporting details "Called, like or As-Like, the Same or Similar."

Breakdown. that which the Constitution stands for Congress is similar to the TOCS administration. which would be As-like, meaning have some resemblance. In the way they resemble is they appear to sit up high and look down low which would be the Like, Same, Okay, The Congress gets the information from from senators saying this is what the people want, The TOCS administration gets the information from Ranking officials and unit commanders saying this is what the banks need. "we the people," this is where they are like because of a chain of command process to get to the top you must have a representative. This breakdown occurs frequently because the legislation, administration receives inaccurate information because of this Textbook vs hands-on mentality. For instance some mechanics fix cars by experience and have never been to school, (trial & error) and some mechanics go to school, to get their information. This is to say that there is to big of a margin between legislation - administration to the lowest level, "we the people". This 2nd major supporting detail is termed pawns in the game. In the game of chess. you push I push, sacrifice, basically as with all piece they cant think but they are the front line. You know what front line means? 1st ory military veterans or anyone who served in a war. 1st to be sacrificed - okay these pawns are the officers, judges, Like the legislation the law or order is given to judges and down to the executive, who deal with the people face to face, okay the administration gives order to workers ranking officials who gives (executive) judges. okay stick with me. They push a pawn okay our job is to win and take as many pawns as we can over to our side, because why they deal with inmates first hand and know that the administration doesnt understand things on that level, why book knowledge, so we push a pawn, our pawn (inmate pawn) pushes finds out whats going on in legislation, administration tells inmate, be careful why reason just stated - some pawns get sacrificed why they

See what's going on on inmate level and go to highest level and treat inmate badly knowing they come from that level. So our hope is we can push a pawn all the way to other side that's for us the people and it'll grow up into whatever we want it to be. The key to bridging this gap is officers on street, jailers in institutions, this is why students at Akron university, upcoming senators, policemen, congressmen are willing to write inmates to get 1st hand knowledge of what's going on and how can we establish a working relationship because of the mis-information in the middle, senators, and ranking officials, looking out for a position wanting to keep poor people poor, and inmates inmates, like when Jesus came scribes and pharisees were afraid they'd lose their position and status with Caesar because Christ saved more people than they

In conclusion, I hope that you can understand the forms of government, and institutions how they are alike, and how they differ, along with the fact that there's some major and minor differences that need to be worked out, the pawns need to make it over safely for they told the truth at the lowest level, once this truth is revealed a working relationship needs to be established with the highest order to the lowest, possibly cutting the middle man and here factor dispelled. Were all humans and play a part in the game of systematic chess
