

"Tangled"

what happens to headphones in your pocket?

when you put them up you can wrap them nice + neat. But when you take them out of their there a tangled mess.

It seems rule doesn't it? Its the headphones who are getting zoom at you. They feel slighted by being abandoned in your pocket. You main happens in there that things could get so messed up?

I'm asking the same sort of questions after spending five years in a one man bathroom cell I never left.

We don't see what happens inside a pocket so we don't acknowledge the little Gremlins that live inside waiting to mess your stuff up. So when you tell people about them they look at you like your crazy.

In one man Segregation those Gremlins have names. Like Post traumatic stress, Shamy, regret, Absence of sunlight, loss of human contact, lack of stimulation lack of purpose.

When the headphones come out and you start to wonder how it could be so bad you learn what is the effect a pocket has on headphones. What happens is your sense of self-shatters along with your trust for your government as it tortures you over a period of years to plead guilty just to make its job easier. Justice and order dissolve into a tangled of personal agendas, politics, and capitalism that feeds on crime like a carnivore creature.

Its like those times when you don't even look at your headphones cause you know how bad it'll be. You take them out and throw them into a corner. Avoiding the reality that at some point you'll have to sit down and untangle the mess you created.

Despite the circumstances that put those headphones in that pocket. The headphones can't untangle themselves.