

Why I use a pen-name.

As the title of this essay states, I'm going to explain why I use the name Lazarus Kayne. The reason being to prevent retaliation by the staff.

To go more in depth about that statement the entire compound, with the exception of the units for the RDAP and Unicorn inmates, gotten ~~shot~~ shook down twice in three days in retaliation for filing on the staff for leaving the units in a mess during the shake down two weeks prior.

That's just one instance. And before I say more, Unicorn and RDAP were spared due to the money they bring to the facility. Now then, another instance of retaliation comes from the mailroom. The woman in charge there likes to reject things she doesn't like even though they are within policy guidelines. You can quote policy to her and write her up and she'll tell the mailroom staff to burn your mail.

Going back to the shake downs, we no longer have TVs in the units because of it. And right now there is no telling when we'll get them back.

Probably when the Associate Warden who had them taken, and the rest of the staff get over their bruised egos.

Look, I know I'm in prison and don't have all the rights I had in the free world, but we do still have rights. And when you intentionally destroy an inmates personal property you go against those rights. Of course, since the people who had their mp3 players, personal papers, and legal paper work destroyed were sex offenders the staff here won't care. Well, most of them won't anyway.

We really need to work on prison reform in this country. Cause I have to say that thirty years for a first offense is way to long. And yes I'm talking about what I got. Thanks for letting me vent.

Jaymes
Rayne