

Ode to Overcoming Ignorance

By Leo Cardez (pen name)

Approx. 250 Words

Genre: Poetry (Not in the purist form, but poetic nonetheless)

Ignorance is the devil's handcuffs on our potential--only education offers the key to unshackle us.

Ignorance is the devil's most powerful tool. It is used to steal our ambition, if we let it. It is the mortal enemy of change and feeds off killing our new ideas.

No one can pretend to be truly learned--not really. The unknown is always lurking in the shadows of the secret chambers of our hearts, but we can decide how much we will allow it to influence our lives. We must embrace a thirst for knowledge to overcome our challenges. We have to stop caring what the world has to say about us; refuse to cower behind social stigmas seeking to dehumanize us and focus on the only thing that matters: Today. Right now.

Stop worrying about challenges and obstacles. Simply decide to learn something new with your whole heart and start making the life we want. Follow our hearts: Let our heartbeats guide us. If something truly excites us (taking a class, reading a book, writing a story) trust that the universe smiles on persistent hearts.

~~Overcoming~~ Overcoming ignorance will be liberating and we will join the ranks of those who refused to listen to the devil's whispers to temper our enthusiasm.

We must never compromise or settle for anything less than our full potential. If you agree, make today the day you start living your life in a fearless relationship with your true potential. It is not the most expected path nor will it be the easiest. But not all pain is bad--freedom can be found through pain.
